A Note to Parents

DK READERS is a compelling program for beginning readers, designed in conjunction with leading literacy experts, including Dr. Linda Gambrell, Distinguished Professor of Education at Clemson University. Dr. Gambrell has served as President of the National Reading Conference, the College Reading Association, and the International Reading Association.

Beautiful illustrations and superb full-color photographs combine with engaging, easy-to-read stories to offer a fresh approach to each subject in the series. Each DK READER is guaranteed to capture a child's interest while developing his or her reading skills, general knowledge, and love of reading.

The five levels of DK READERS are aimed at different reading abilities, enabling you to choose the books that are exactly right for your child:

Pre-level 1: Learning to read

Level 1: Beginning to read

Level 2: Beginning to read alone

Level 3: Reading alone

Level 4: Proficient readers

The “normal” age at which a child begins to read can be anywhere from three to eight years old. Adult participation through the lower levels is very helpful for providing encouragement, discussing storylines, and sounding out unfamiliar words.

No matter which level you select, you can be sure that you are helping your child learn to read, then read to learn!

“I saw pale strangers!”

A hunter returned to the Indian village shouting the news.

“They are building a town.”

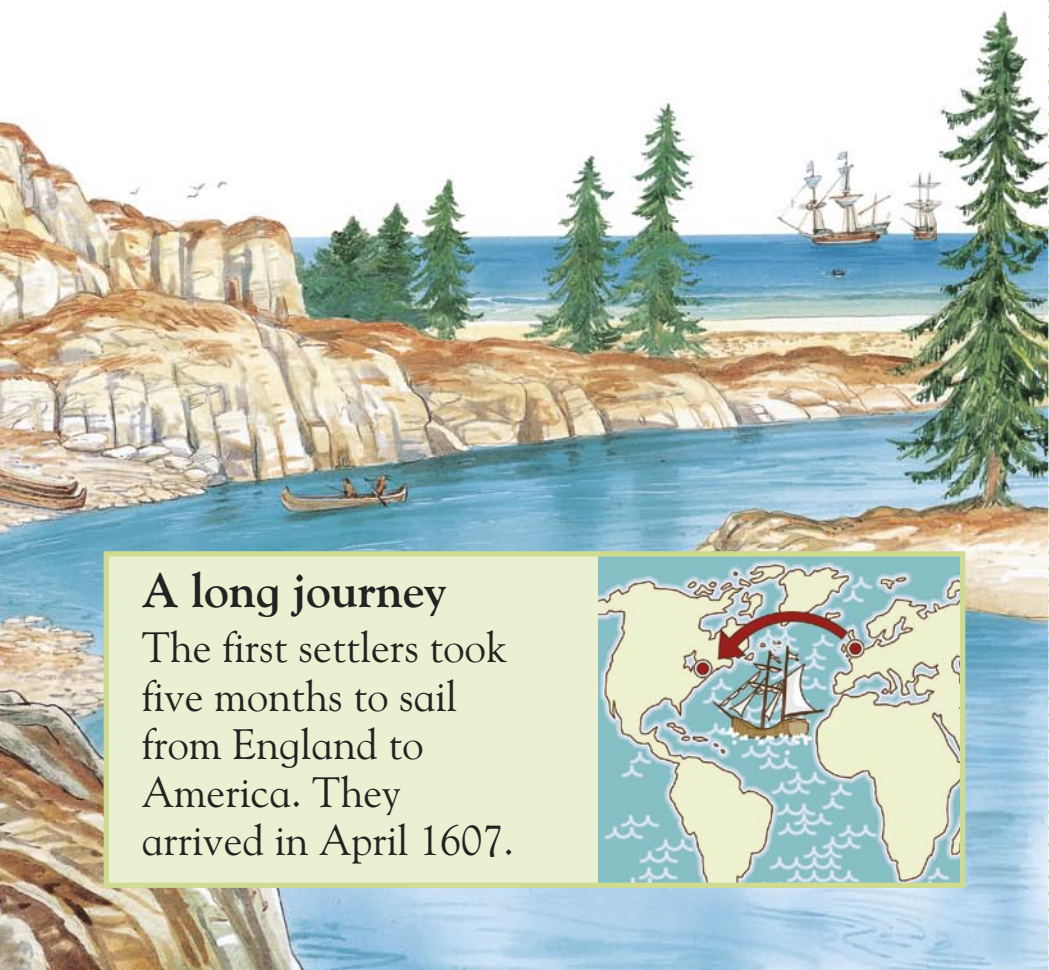

Pocahontas ran to listen.

“Isn’t it exciting, Father?”

said Pocahontas.

Her father, Chief Powhatan, frowned. “We shall see.”

A long journey

The first settlers took five months to sail from England to America. They arrived in April 1607.

Powhatan sent Pocahontas and a group of scouts to the strangers' town.

They walked silently, hiding among the trees.

Everything about the settlers was strange.

Some even had hair on their faces!

Bravely, Pocahontas stepped forward and greeted them with a smile.
A hairy-faced man smiled back.

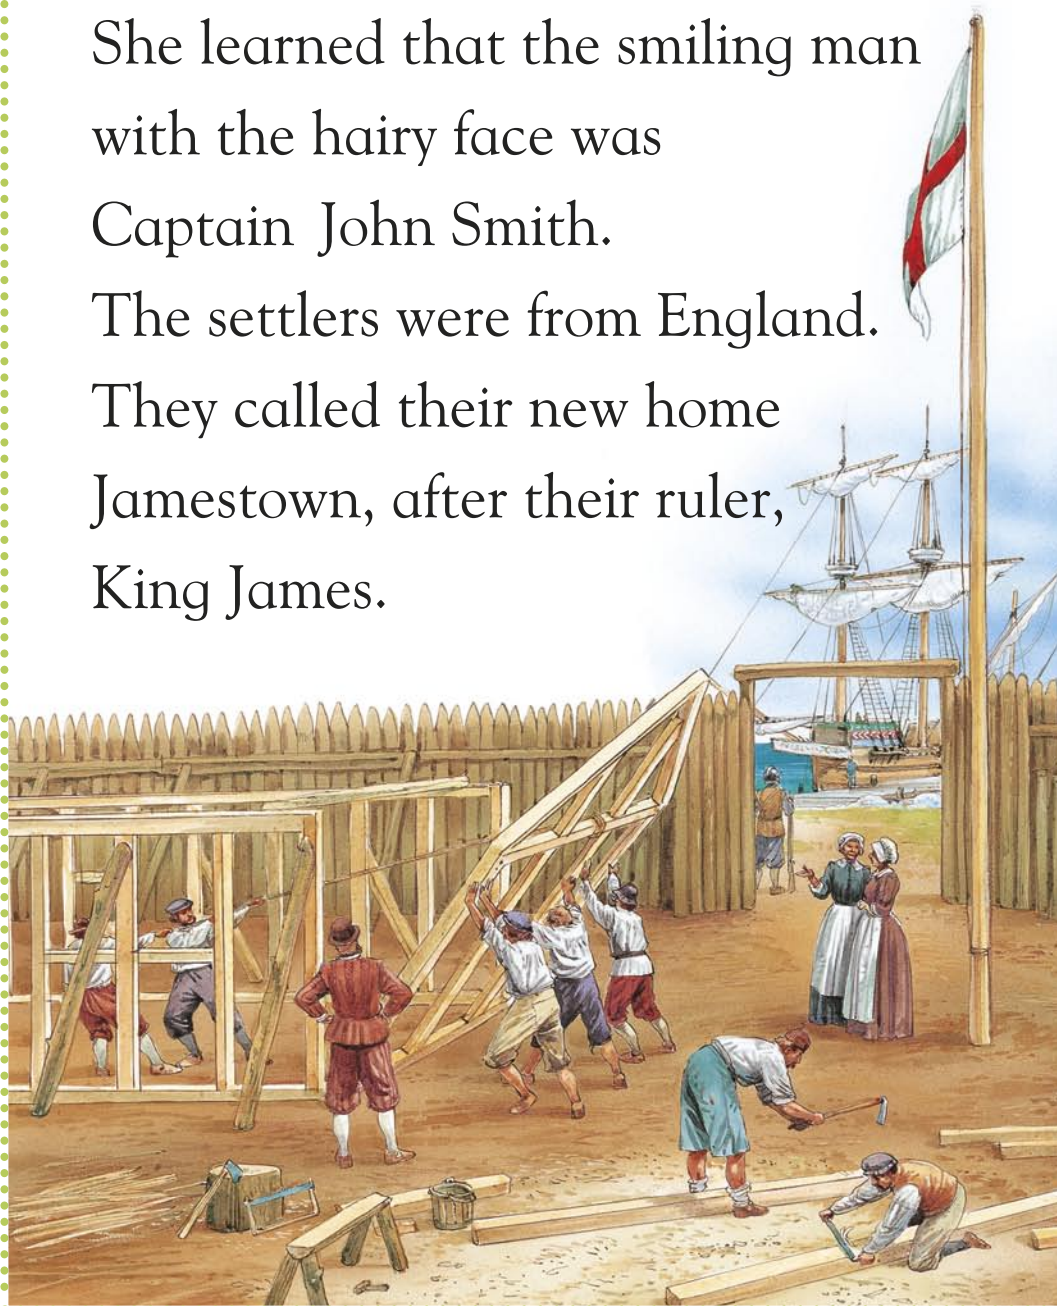

The new land

The settlers unloaded their ships and set out to explore America.
They hoped to find
gold and other riches.

Pocahontas made many visits to the settlers' town.
She learned that the smiling man with the hairy face was Captain John Smith.
The settlers were from England.
They called their new home
Jamestown, after their ruler, King James.

Sometimes Pocahontas brought food for the hungry settlers.
They knew many things,
but they did not know how to grow corn.

Pocahontas liked the settlers,
but many Indians did not.
Chief Powhatan held a meeting.
“The pale strangers mean trouble,” he told his people.
“If we attack them, they will go away.”
“Father, let’s be friends with them,”
said Pocahontas.
“Strangers take our land,” said Powhatan.
“They cannot be trusted.”

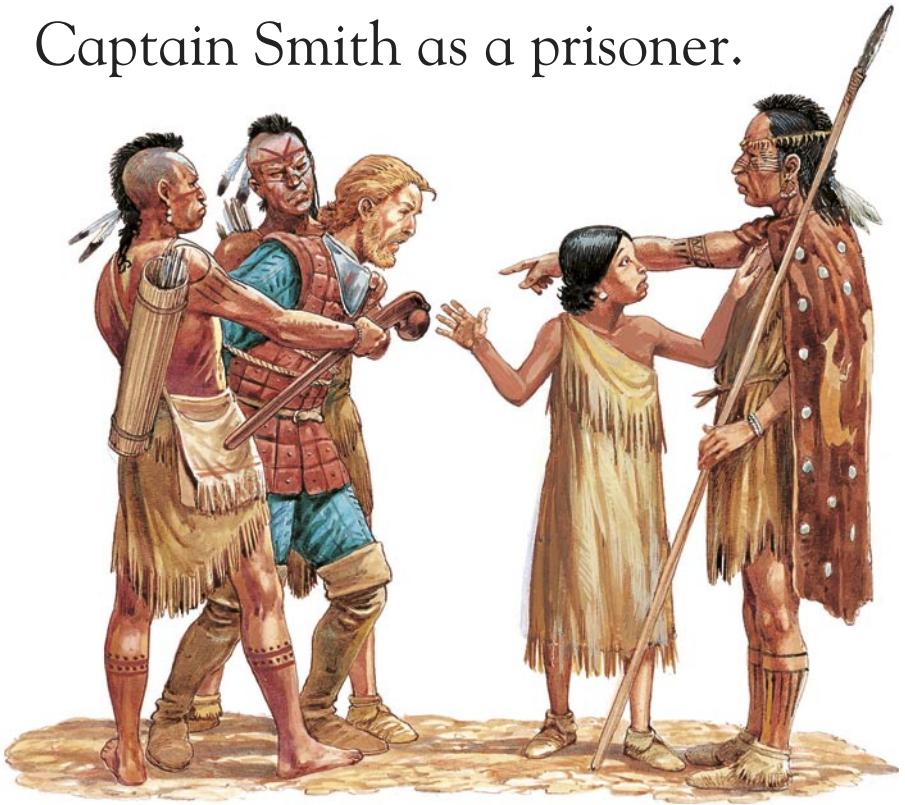

Chief Powhatan

Pocahontas’s father, Powhatan, was chief of more than 14,000 Indians. His tribes lived in many nearby villages.

Powhatan's warriors took Captain Smith as a prisoner.

“Let him go, Father,”

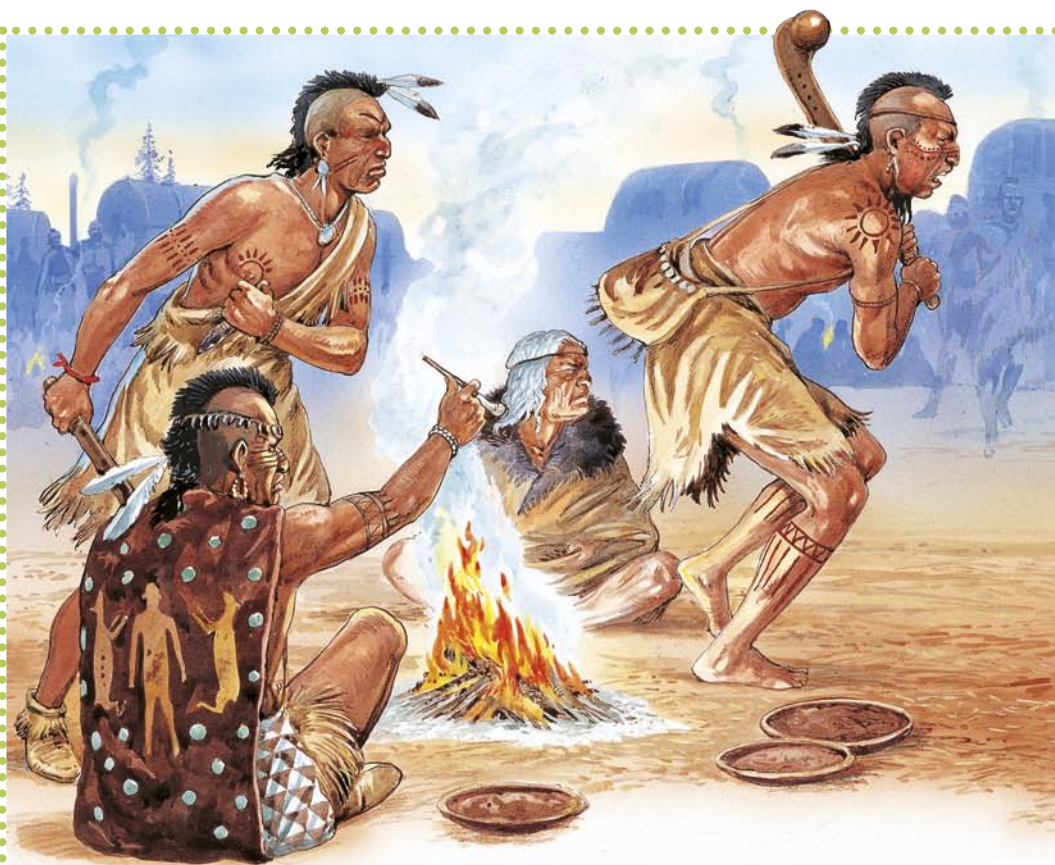

Pocahontas pleaded.

“No,” said Powhatan.

“We must show the strangers that there are a great many of us.
Then they will not fight us.”

The warriors took Smith to see many Indian villages.
The Indians treated him as a guest.
But they would not let him go free.

One day, Powhatan held a feast in his own village.

Pocahontas watched as the warriors arrived with Captain Smith.

Powhatan gave a signal.

Suddenly, the warriors swung their clubs over Smith's head.

Pocahontas raced forward.

“Stop!” she shouted.

“Don’t kill him!”

Powhatan ordered the warriors to put down their clubs.

“You are lucky,” he told Smith.

“My daughter has saved your life.”

Pocahontas and John Smith became friends.

Smith taught Pocahontas to speak English.

She taught him some Indian words.

Pocahontas asked her father to help the settlers.

They were not used to the harsh winter.

Chief Powhatan gave them food from the autumn harvest.
The settlers were grateful.
For a while,
the Indians and settlers
lived in peace.

One day, another ship arrived, bringing more English settlers.
The new settlers took more land.
This made Powhatan angry.
Pocahontas and Captain Smith tried to keep the peace.
But the Indians and the settlers did not like each other.

Winter came again.
Captain Smith wanted to trade
English goods for food.
He camped near Powhatan's village.

Pocahontas heard her father plan to attack the camp.

Trading for food

The hungry settlers had goods from England for trading. They wanted the Indians to give them corn and other food in return.

Pocahontas waited until everyone was asleep.
Then she walked through the wind and snow to warn her friend.
“You have saved me again, Pocahontas,” said Smith.

Many seasons passed.
Pocahontas grew into a young woman
and moved to a new village.
She heard that her friend,
John Smith, had died.
The Indians and settlers

One day, an English ship docked near the village.
Pocahontas went on board to visit.
The ship's captain, Captain Argall, would not let her leave.
She was kidnapped!

Captain Argall took Pocahontas to a new town near Jamestown. Pocahontas learned to act like a settler. She wore heavy cloth dresses and a cap on her head.

She went to church with her new friends.
They baptized her and gave her the English name Rebecca.

The settlers' church

Church was very important to the settlers, and Pocahontas was baptized into the Christian religion.

All of the settlers liked Pocahontas, especially a man named John Rolfe.
Pocahontas wanted to marry him.
Powhatan made peace with the settlers to celebrate his daughter's marriage.
It was the best wedding present Pocahontas could have.
Pocahontas and her husband had a baby named Thomas.
They all sailed across the ocean to visit England.

“What do you think of England?”

John Rolfe asked his wife.

“There are so many people!”

Pocahontas replied.

The people stared at Pocahontas.

They had never seen an Indian before.

She remembered

how she had stared when she first saw the settlers.

So she just smiled.

A visit to England

In England, many people wanted to meet Pocahontas and learn about America.

King James and Queen Anne thought Pocahontas was charming.

Pocahontas had been in England for several months
when she became ill.
One day, she had a surprise visitor.

It was Captain Smith!

“You’re alive!” gasped Pocahontas.

“Alive and well,” Smith replied.

“You must get well, too.”

Sadly, Pocahontas did not get better.

She was only 21 years old when she died.

Pocahontas helped to bring peace and friendship between the settlers and Indians in America.

A memorial

This statue stands in Gravesend, England,
where Pocahontas is buried.
She is remembered as a brave and clever girl.

Indians and Settlers

In 1492, Christopher Columbus set sail for India. He landed on America instead! But he called the Native Americans “Indians.”

Pocahontas was about eleven years old when the settlers arrived in Jamestown in 1607. Pocahontas is a nickname that means “playful.” Her real name was Matoaka.

When the Puritans of England heard about Jamestown, they decided to sail to America, too. Their ship, the Mayflower, landed in Plymouth, Massachusetts, in 1620.

Pocahontas’s son, Thomas, grew up in England. As an adult, he returned to live in America on land given to him by his grandfather, Chief Powhatan.

You can visit a re-creation of Pocahontas’s village and the Jamestown settlement near the original site in Virginia.
